Awards won by the Festival

Year	Award
1998	The Bregenz Festival is the first organisation in the cultural sector to receive the State Prize for Public Relations from the Federal Minister of Economic Affairs of the Republic of Austria – for crossculture, its programme for young people.
2000	The opera at the Festspielhaus in the 1999 season, The Greek Passion – a co-production with the Royal Opera House Covent Garden – wins the coveted "British theatre Oscar", the Laurence Olivier Award , as the best opera production of the year.
2000	A Masked Ball is named Stage Set of the Year by the specialist magazine Opernwelt . It's the first time the Bregenz Festival has won this prestigious critics' award and the first time the award has gone to an open-air production.
2006	The development of the globally unique sound system Bregenz Open Acoustics, BOA, in collaboration with the Fraunhofer Institute, Illmenau (Germany), and the installation of the system on the Bregenz Lake Stage wins the festival the German opera stage award "Opus" in the category Sound Design.
2008	The stage for Tosca is named Stage Set of the Year by the specialist magazine Opernwelt . The blue eye of giant dimensions is not just an apt image for the Puccini opera, but also a striking backdrop with high symbolic value for the TV studio that broadcast the football championships and as a location for the Bond movie Quantum of Solace , according to the magazine.
2009	In association with the respected German weekly Die Zeit the Berlin agency Causales names the Bregenz Festival Cultural Brand of the Year for their branding and corporate communications.
2009	Designer Raimund Bauer and the Bregenz Festival win the German opera stage award "Opus" for the stage set for King Roger , the opera at the Festspielhaus.
2009	The Bregenz Festival's Ernst Krenek retrospective is named Rediscovery of the Year by the specialist magazine Opernwelt .
2009	The Jahrbuch der Werbung , an authoritative yearbook for the media and communications industry, publishes the best advertising campaigns in German-speaking countries. The festival's new marketing strategy is included in the book, in the categories Posters and Integrated Campaign.
2010	The Jahrbuch der Werbung declares the festival's evening programmes the winner in the Cultural and Social Organisations category and the posters are featured once again in the yearbook.

- 2011 The Passenger (Die Passagierin), the previous season's opera at the Festspielhaus, is named Rediscovery of the Year by the specialist magazine Opernwelt, which surveyed 50 critics from several European countries and the USA. The results of the survey appear in the yearbook, published in Berlin at the start of October.
- 2011 The Bregenz Festival wins gold in the 2011 Export Awards in the Tourism category. The Austrian Export Awards were initiated by the Austrian Federal Economic Chamber in 1994 and are awarded to Austrian companies that are successful on foreign markets. Export performance of the previous two years is assessed.
- 2012 The Festspielhaus production of The Passenger (Die Passagierin) is nominated for the Laurence Olivier Award in the category Best New Opera Production. The Olivier Awards are the most prestigious theatre award in the United Kingdom and are considered equivalent to the Tony Awards on Broadway and the Oscars.
- 2014 The Festspielhaus opera The Merchant of Venice is named Best New Production at the International Opera Awards in London.
